The course syllabus is valid from autumn semester 2024.

Prerequisites

General entry requirements, with the exception of Swedish, and English 6.

Objectives

After completing the course, the student should be able to do the following:

- account for, interpret and discuss basic concepts in English linguistics and literary studies
- identify and account for research questions, methods, material and results in scientific publications, at a basic level
- conduct basic linguistic analyses

- conduct basic literary analyses
- produce written and oral texts in English that serve their given purpose
- describe their own knowledge of English linguistics and literature and identify their needs for further knowledge.

Intended learning outcomes for each module:

Module 1. English linguistics, 14 credits

After completing the module, the student should be able to

- demonstrate good knowledge of a number of linguistic areas, and discuss and use basic linguistic terminology in analyses within these areas
- account for and explain basic grammatical concepts and principles in the English language, and apply these in their own spoken and written production of English
- critically review the aims and relevance of linguistic texts at a basic level
- conduct basic grammatical analyses
- account for the methodological basis of language-history studies in English and demonstrate basic insights regarding processes of change and variation in the English language, as well as an ability to evaluate important factors influencing such processes
- account for and analyse the history and development of the English language, at a basic level
- interpret contemporary English in its many forms through the history of the language.

Module 2. English literature, 10 credits

After completing the module, the student should be able to

- demonstrate basic knowledge of the historical and cultural contexts of literary texts
- form a basic understanding of literature as a research field
- identify and compare literary genres and forms on the basis of a broad understanding of the text concept
- critically review the aims and relevance of literary research texts at a basic level
- discuss the applicability of different theoretical tools in the analysis of a specific literary text,
- structure a literary analysis at a basic level, in accordance with field-specific conventions, based on a theoretical approach.

Module 3. Theme course, 3 credits

After completing the module, the student should be able to

- discuss, problematise and analyse one or several linguistic or cultural themes, or themes specific to the student's programme.

Module 4. Portfolio, 3 credits

After completing the module, the student should be able to

- write short academic texts that are well-structured, for the most part grammatically correct, and adapted to different contexts, using appropriate vocabulary
- use correct referencing and refer to secondary sources
- demonstrate good skills in holding short, well-prepared, coherent oral presentations that are not too dependent on a manuscript (that is, without reading directly from the manuscript). The presentations should be delivered in adequate English serving its given purpose, and the content should be relevant, adapted to the situation and of an academic quality.

Content

In the first semester of English studies, the students acquire basic knowledge of the English language. The course begins with an introduction to general grammar. The students develop and broaden their knowledge of grammar, linguistics and literature, and are introduced to a linguistic, cultural or programme-specific theme specific for the subject of English. The students practise competencies such as independent work, cooperation, critical thinking, oral and written communication skills, time management and analytical skills.

The course includes the following modules:

Module 1. English linguistics, 14 credits

The component Introduction to English linguistics includes and general introduction to the form and function of the English language and discusses the methods and terminology of different fields in linguistics, e.g., phonetics and morphology. These fields are discussed, analysed and problematised in lectures, seminars and oral and written exercises, individually and in groups.

The component English language history includes an introduction to the history and development of the English language. It introduces the methodological basis of English language history studies and presents factors that play an important role in processes of change and variation in English. It includes an introduction to the history of the English language. The students are given the opportunity to interpret contemporary English in its many forms through the history of the language.

The component English grammar includes an introduction to English grammar, and the students develop their abilities to understand and explain general grammatical concepts and principles, and apply these in their own spoken and written English. The subject is discussed, analysed and problematised in lectures, seminars and oral and written exercises, individually and in groups.

Module 2. English literature, 10 credits

This module exemplifies and discusses a number of different forms and genres on the basis of a broad understanding of the text concept. The module introduces tools for literary analysis, which are subsequently applied in in-depth analyses of texts in an additional number of genres. The texts are studied in relation to their cultural and historical contexts. The module prepares the student for academic writing in the research field, through practical exercises and analyses of texts specific to the discipline.

Module 3. Theme course, 3 credits

This module presents, discusses, analyses and problematises one or several linguistic or cultural themes, or themes specific to the student's programme. The module prepares the student for academic writing about the themes discussed through practical exercises and analyses of texts specific to the discipline.

Module 4. Portfolio, 3 credits

This module includes exercises in oral and written language proficiency linked to modules 1–3. The assessment of the students' language proficiency is formative. The students' language proficiency is examined at the end of the course, as part of Module 4. See the section on examination below for information on the content and organisation of the examination.

Type of Instruction

Teaching is delivered in the form of lectures, seminars and oral and written exercises, individually and in groups. All sessions marked as seminars in the schedule are compulsory.

Examination

The course is assessed with the grades Fail (U), Pass (G) or Pass with Distinction (VG).

In order to receive the grade of Pass, the student must achieve the objectives. Grading criteria for the grade of Pass with Distinction will be specified in writing when the course starts.

In order to receive the grade of Pass with Distinction for the whole course, the student must have received this grade for at least 14 of the 30 credits, including at least two of the component parts of Module 4: Portfolio.

The modules are examined as follows:

Module 1. English linguistics, 14 credits

This module is examined through a written room examination in English grammar (4 credits) and written hand-in assignments and oral presentations (10 credits).

Module 2. English literature, 10 credits:

This module is examined through written hand-in assignments and oral presentations (10 credits).

Module 3. Theme course, 3 credits:

This module is examined through a written hand-in assignment and an oral presentation (3 credits).

Module 4. Portfolio, 3 credits:

This module is examined through a written room examination in essay writing (1 credit), a Portfolio (written hand-in assignment, 1 credit) and an oral presentation (1 credit).

Since one of the fundamental objectives of the course is for the student to be able to use the English language in a correct, varied and contextually appropriate manner, language proficiency is assessed formatively in all modules. The student's oral and written language proficiency is examined summatively through the final examination in Module 4: Portfolio.

If the university has decided that a student has the right to special educational support due to a disability, the examiner may offer an adapted test or allow the student to conduct the test in an alternative form.

For students who do not pass their first examinations, retake examinations are provided in accordance with Local regulations for courses and examinations at the first and second levels at Linnaeus University.

Course Evaluation

During or shortly after the course, a course evaluation is conducted. Results and analysis of the course evaluation are promptly communicated to the students who have taken the course. Students who are taking the course when it is offered the next time are informed of the results at the start of the course. The evaluation is anonymous.

Overlap

The course cannot be included in a degree along with the following course/courses of which the content fully, or partly, corresponds to the content of this course:
1ENÄ12 (27 credits), 1EN20Ä (27 credits).
