Objectives

After completion of the course the student is expected to be able to:

- identify and use sources of law and information as well as to assess and value the relevance of such sources by taking an independent and critical approach to them
- analyse legal problems and argue in connection to them, stating relevant sources of law
- reflect on how legal problems are linked to theories and methods of relevance to the field
- apply substantive law
- analyse theoretical and methodological issues in connection to specific legal problems
- show, in written presentations, a well-developed ability to deal with issues of method, theory and terminology as well as to show good analytical skill and a critical approach
- argue a case orally, in a well-presented manner and with a good factual and legal basis
- carry out assignments relating to legal science independently and within a given time frame
- analyse legal problems and argue in connection to them from the perspective of diversity, stating relevant sources of law
- value and take a critical approach to the various relevant sources of law which are related to the field of law treated

Content

The course deals with the content of European legal regulation as expressed in the legal acts issued by supranational and international institutions. Its starting-point is regulation as a creator of rights and obligations for individuals. The fields of law treated are, first, those relating to the free movement of persons, labour and services within the European Union and, second, those relating to business and contract law. As a consequence, the development and basic principles of EU law are treated as well as its relationship to and implementation in national law.

Further subjects dealt with are the legal prerequisites for free movement in relation to the employment protection of migrant persons and workers. In the fields of business and contract law, issues in international trade relating to contract law, the law on the rights and obligations of agents and the law on the sale of goods are treated. Problems relating to private international law and international procedural law are also discussed. The course deals with this legal regulation from the perspective of practical application, from the perspective of theory and methodology, and from a critical perspective relating to equality and diversity.

As regards sources, the focus is on legal acts issued by the European Union (EU), the United Nations (UN), the International Labour Organisation (ILO) and the Council of Europe, but national Swedish legal acts are also dealt with.

Type of Instruction

Teaching is provided in the form of lectures, seminars and tutoring of written papers. The course has two main parts: one part consisting of lectures and seminars, and one part consisting of the supervision of a written individual assignment. The seminars, which are compulsory, are based on a presentation of the group projects as well as the individual assignment. Obligatory parts are stated in the schedule.

Examination

The course is assessed with the grades A, B, C, D, E, Fx or F.

The student performance is assessed through group projects presented in seminars, through a written exam and through an individual written assignment that should be presented and defended at an opposition seminar. The individual written assignment should cover an issue within the course curriculum and the subject is chosen after consultation with the course coordinator.

The grade A constitutes the highest grade on the scale and the remaining grades follow in descending order where the grade E is the lowest grade on the scale that will result in a pass. The grade F means that the student's performance is assessed as fail.

After each regular examination there will be at least one new examination in close proximity to the date the results of the regular exam were posted. Students who are close to the passing grade of reports can complement after instructions and time-frame given by the examiner to obtain a pass grade.

Grading criteria for the A–F scale are communicated in writing to the student by the start of the course at the latest.

Course Evaluation

During the implementation of the course or in close connection to the course a course evaluation is to be carried out. Result and analysis of the course evaluation is to be presented as feedback both to the students who have completed the course and to the students who are to participate on the course the next time it is offered. The course evaluation is to be carried out anonymously.

Credit Overlap

The course cannot be included in a degree along with the following courses of which the content fully, or partly, corresponds to the content of this course: The course overlaps IRV016 with 100 %.
