Objectives

After completing the course the student is expected to be able to:

- identify, formulate and analyse legal problems within a legal field
- independently search for information and make a critical evaluation of it
- plan and conduct a qualified investigation
- account for and discuss the results of the investigation conducted, both in writing and orally

- identify the need for further knowledge of the field
- perform an analysis from the perspective of equality or diversity, as well as show how the issue in question can be placed in an international context

Content

During the course, students will independently produce a written degree project. The degree project will be defended at a seminar. Each student will also act as opponent for another student's degree project. Students will agree with their degree project supervisor on the subject for their degree project and the literature to be studied.

Type of Instruction

Teaching is provided in the form of lectures, seminars and degree project supervision. Obligatory parts are stated in the schedule.

Examination

The course is assessed with the grades A, B, C, D, E, Fx or F.

To pass the course, the student must have completed a degree project corresponding to 15 credits.

Student performance will be assessed in connection with the student's presentation and defense of the degree project at a public seminar. The assessment also covers the student's acting as the opponent for another degree project. Defense and opposition are compulsory assessment components.

The grade A constitutes the highest grade on the scale and the remaining grades follow in descending order where the grade E is the lowest grade on the scale that will result in a pass. The grade F means that the student's performance is assessed as fail.

Grading criteria for the A–F scale are communicated in writing to the student by the start of the course/module at the latest, as well as how grades on separate elements of examination are weighed to a final course grade.

A degree project that is not assessed to possibly fulfill the requirements at the final tutoring is recommended not to be treated at the originally scheduled final seminar.

Course Evaluation

A written course evaluation is carried out and compiled in a report, which is archived at the faculty. The results and possible measures taken are communicated by the course coordinator and presented to the students the next time the course is given, or in another way deemed suitable by the course coordinator. Other types of course evaluations, for example regular evaluations throughout the course or discussions with students, will be included and encouraged with the aim of ensuring continuous quality development.
