General entry requirements for second-cycle studies in Social Sciences, Humanities, Economics, or the equivalent. English 6, or the equivalent.

Objectives

After completing the course, students shall be able to:

- account for theories used in foreign policy analysis
- identify and problematize foreign policy issues
- define and formulate an independent research problem within the scope of the theme foreign policy analysis
- independently and in a creative manner conduct a foreign policy analysis assignment
- orally as well as in writing account for arguments and conclusions in discussions with teachers and other students.

Content

The course discusses and problematizes theoretical and political discussions with regard to contemporary issues on foreign policy analysis. This entails deeper discussions on the aspects of foreign policy, how it is shaped and why, with special emphasis on the foreign policy of powerful states in relation to international issues of current interest. One or a few politically topical foreign policy issues are also discussed in more detail.

Type of Instruction

Teaching consists of lectures and seminars.

Examination

The course is assessed with the grades A, B, C, D, E, Fx or F. Grade A represents the highest grade, and the subsequent grades follow in descending order, where grade E is the lowest grade that qualifies as a Pass. A grade of F means that the student's performance is assessed as Fail. Fx is not a grade and is only used when a student is permitted to supplement his/her examination. Examination consists of three seminars including written assignments, graded as Pass (G) or Fail (U), and an advanced and more extensive written assignment, assessed by the use of the grading scale A-F. To be awarded a grade of Pass (E), it is required that all the intended learning outcomes and all the examination components are assessed as Pass. The final grade in the course (A-F) is determined by the grade for the more extensive assignment. Information about the grading criteria of the A-F scale is given in a separate document provided at the start of the course, at the latest.

Course Evaluation

A course evaluation is carried out either during or at the end of the course. Results and analysis of the evaluation are presented to the students who have completed the course, as well as to new students at the following course date. The course evaluation is conducted anonymously.
